

YOUR SUPER IS YOUR BUSINESS. WHY LET A GREEDY BANK LOOK AFTER YOUR SUPER?

When it comes to choosing a super fund, plenty of people rely on the boss to look out for them.

And if you've gone with the super fund RURAL PRESS has chosen for you - ANZ Smart Choice - you'll know your boss has chosen a bank to manage your super. The trouble with this is, banks are good for many things but not for MANAGING SUPER.

ANZ is a profit seeking organisation that has to pay shareholders. And it's fair to say they put these shareholders first, they were one of the organisations disgraced in front of the BANKING ROYAL COMMISSION FOR FAILING TO ACT IN CUSTOMERS' BEST INTERESTS.

Not only that, it's very likely delivered you lower than average investment returns on your super, not just once or twice but for years. That's your money and your future we're talking about. And it can add up to tens of thousands over a lifetime.

If you're with ANZ Smart Choice isn't it time to put your super in safe hands?

Choosing a fund with low fees, no commissions and a strong performance history is the key. A fund run to benefit workers - not the banks' bottom line. There is a way for workers to take back control of their super.

Thousands of workers are making the switch to their industry super fund

The industry super fund for Printers, Journalists, Photographers, Designers and others working in the media industry is MEDIA SUPER. They've been acting in members' best interests since 1988. They give all profits to members, earn sound investment returns, work for low fees and invest back into our industry.

WHAT DID THE ROYAL COMMISSION FIND OUT ABOUT WHERE YOU KEEP YOUR SUPERANNUATION?

ANZ's wealth business failed to put $28 million of default superannuation contributions into no-frills MySuper accounts between January and October of 2014, when the lower-cost super regime came into effect. About 2500 members received approximately $600,000 in compensation. It later identified a further $18 million in super contributions that it had mishandled in a similar way, leading to another $423,000 in compensation.

The bank failed to identify and pay the balances of approximately 64,000 lost or inactive superannuation accounts worth $133 million to the Tax Office where customers were no longer a member of the relevant employer sponsored fund. It paid $7.2 million compensation last year.

ANZ reported the conduct of 39 advisers to the Australian Securities and Investments Commission in 2015, because it had "serious compliance concerns," and has made reports about the conduct of 41 advisers or representatives since then. Some of the conduct it reported included advisers improperly using customer funds, falsifying documents, false witnessing of client signatures, and deliberate overcharging.
