

The passing of a loved one is the most difficult time in a person's life. It is a time when many of us would like to shut ourselves away to grieve, but it is also a time when we are expected to make important decisions about how to farewell the departed. Let the compassionate and caring funeral operators on the Central Coast assist you with the funeral arrangements.

Your local funeral operator will help you to organise a meaningful service that celebrates the life of your loved one. Culturally appropriate services can be personalised to suit your faith, beliefs and traditions. Whether you would prefer a civil or religious ceremony, burial or cremation you can rely on the Central Coast funeral directors to offer sympathy, support and dependable advice and recommendations.

Many people feel too overwhelmed to organise a funeral when they lose someone close to them. Your local funeral director will be able to handle all the arrangements for you. You can be as involved in the process as you would like. Funeral and memorial services can be personalised to commemorate the life of your loved one. Select a chapel or outdoor venue, traditional service order or something more contemporary. Remember the deceased with a smile or a tear, as they make their final journey via hearse or horse-drawn carriage. However you decide to honour their wishes and celebrate their memory you will receive a dignified and professional reception from any of the funeral homes in the region.

A number of funeral operators also offer a pre-paid funeral facility. This is becoming fairly commonplace throughout Australia. Anyone is eligible to take out a pre-paid funeral plan, regardless of age. By pre-arranging your funeral you are able to choose the type and style of your send-off. One of the main considerations when pre-arranging your funeral however is cost. When you book and pre-pay for your funeral, you save considerably—you pay for the service you book at today's current prices.

A pre-paid funeral plan is fully customisable. Decide the style of ceremony you'd like, be it a religious, civil or spiritual and whether you'd like to nominate a minister or celebrant to deliver the sermon or eulogy. Other details you should consider include viewing arrangements, cremation or burial, type of casket, flowers, mourning vehicles and death notices. Most Central Coast funeral operators also allow and encourage you to include special features such as having a poem read or favourite song played.

And there is no worry about losing money with a pre-paid funeral plan. Once you have chosen your funeral director and paid for the service, your money is securely invested in a funeral fund registered with the NSW Government's Office of Fair Trading. You can rest assured knowing that your final arrangements will be carried out just how you organised them.

Turn to one of the compassionate funeral directors based on the Central Coast for trustworthy, dependable services when you need them most.
